The Lamp of the Body is the Eye

“If you do not know,” He says, “What a thing it is to be injured in mind, learn it from things of the body. For just what the eye is to the body, the same is the mind to the souls ...Just as when the eyes are blinded, most the energy of the other members is gone – their light being quenched – so also when the mind is depraved, your life will be filled with countless evils. ...For God,” he says, “gave us understanding, so we might chase away all ignorance, and have the right judgment of things; and that using this as a kind of weapon and light against all that is grievous or hurtful, we might remain in safety. But we betray the gift for the sake of things superfluous and useless...”

Do you see how by degrees He withdraws us from the things that now are, and at greater length introduces what He has to say regarding voluntary poverty, and casts down the dominion of covetousness? ...Do not tell me of this who are rich, but of those who serve riches, since Job also was rich, but he did not serve mammon. ...He so possessed all those things, as if he had been a steward of another man's goods. –St. John Chrysostom, Homily 20: 3 & 21: 2 on Matthew 6.
